Scrap Rubber Pours in Here

Local filling stations tell The Star today that the response to the campaign to gather up scrap rubber is unbelievably great. The filling stations say that Washington hasn't the slightest idea how much old rubber is lying around the country—and all of it is heading into town to help in the war effort.

Hope Experiment Station to Hold Visiting Day

The fourteenth Annual Visiting Day will be held at the University of Arkansas Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station, near Hope, Friday, June 26, George W. Ware, assistant director in charge of the station, said in announcing the program.

Because of the tire situation, this is the only visiting day to be held at the station this year, and Mr. Ware stated that a large crowd was expected to attend this event which has become an annual institution in Southwest Arkansas.

The morning program beginning at 9:30 embraces visits over the 185-acre farm where specialists of the College of Agriculture will demonstrate various improved practices with fruit, truck, field crops, pastures, and soil conservation.

A special musical and stunt program will be held during the noon hour, at which time dinner will be served by the Hempstead County Home Demonstration Council.

Senator and President to Speak

The afternoon program, beginning at 1 p.m., features addresses by Senator Lloyd Spencer, Dr. Arthur M. Hays Sulzberger, University of Arkansas, and Dr. Walter R. Horlacher, Dean and Director of the College of Agriculture.

Following the speaking program, women visitors will have an opportunity to tour the grounds and study landscaping, and the men will inspect experimental pastures.

Horse Show 3 p. m.

A timely feature of special interest will be a horse and carriage show and parade, following the general program. A large number of show, carriage, and utility horses and mules from several counties have been engaged for this unusual demonstration. This particular feature promises to be an outstanding attraction which will please and thrill the large number of visitors expected to be present.

Rubber Found in Old Field

By NEA Service
Newark, O. — There was a spring in Vernon Johnson's step as he walked across the sunlit fields the other day. As a native Johnson is all for the buoyant stride, but this day it worried him. It was too sudden, and he didn't seem to be doing the springing.

It couldn't be the Jersey Bounce, he decided, for he was standing on the good earth of Licking County, Ohio. Puzzled, he gazed down at the ground. He leaned over and scraped away a little dirt. Suddenly he beheld a sight that would have made the Kohinoor diamond dull by comparison.

He Got Razzed—at First

He gathered up a few chunks and rushed into town. Some Newark citizens laughed at him, as other citizens in other climes had laughed at Archimedes, Galileo and Columbus. But not Morris Patton and Harry Friedman of the Franklin Auto Parts Co.

"That," they said, "is rubber. Show us more."

He did. Together they started digging buried treasure. Finally they located a steam shovel and went at it in earnest. After three hours more than 10 tons of crude rubber had been discovered. They also found some large batches of processed rubber.

Among the hundreds of reformed scoffers who turned out to watch the digging were some who recalled that, back in the dear, lush days beyond recall, a Newark rubber firm had thrown away this black gold as being second rate. Today two Akron companies are buying it at twice the price of scrap rubber. The discoverer, and the enterprising Franklin Auto Parts Co., have hopes of extracting 500 tons of treasure from their

Black Sea Fleet Aids Defenders of Sevastopol

Moscow —(P)— Steaming into the fight for Sevastopol with its guns thundering, the Soviet Black Sea fleet was reported Monday to have brought aid to the hard pressed land garrison by laying down a deadly barrage which took a heavy toll of Axis assault forces.

The battles in the siege line around the Crimean port and on the front east of Kharkov continue with undiminished fury.

However, there were no further reports of German gains on either front since dispatches Sunday which said the Germans had pushed forward in some sectors at Kharkov and turned loose a full-scale onslaught against Sevastopol in attempt to smash Russian defense by sheer weight of men and armor.

Dispatches from the Crimean flank did not identify the warships whose guns were reported in action for the first time since June 5 when the new battle for the port began.

The warships previously had been engaged in maintaining a line of supply and communications for the port and naval base which has been cut off by land since last fall.

Naval infantry has been in action ashore for some time and the Germans were reported to have bolstered assault forces with strong reserve strength including units shifted from other fronts.

Elwood Smith Rescued From Sunk Carrier

Miss Gertrude Smith, announced Monday that her brother, Elwood Smith who was aboard the U. S. Aircraft Carrier Lexington when the vessel was sunk in the recent Coral sea battle, telephoned her from San Diego Sunday that he was "safe and sound."

"I escaped with only my clothes," young Smith said relating no details whatever about the battle.

Chinese Admit Losing Ground

By the Associated Press
The Japanese were admitted Monday to be closing their Chekiang-Kiangsi pincers on the Chinese defenders of the last unconquered stretch of the railway flanking Hangchow and Nanchang.

Chungking acknowledged officially that a Japanese column striking into China's Chekiang province had penetrated Kwangtung, 25 miles east of the Chekiang border thus reducing the Chinese-held section of the railway to less than 100 miles.

The Chinese communiqué also admitted the loss of Yushan between Kwangtung and the provincial border.

While the Chinese fought a battle of delay the China Times at Chungking urged an Allied offensive at once to push the Japanese from the Aleutians and "pursue them right into the heart of Japan."

The newspaper also exhorted Russia to provide the U. S. with bases in the Vladivostok area on the Kamcharka peninsula for a direct assault on the enemy.

Rome Indicates Major Sea Fight With British

By the Associated Press
A great running sea-air battle which on the face of Axis reports—the only information available thus far—seems to have stemmed from major strategic moves of the Allies was being fought Monday at Italy's Mediterranean door step between Tunis and Sardinia.

Suggests 2 Possibilities

The location of the battle, its strength and composition as given from Rome for Allied naval forces, and the reckless expenditure of planes in the attack on it, suggested either that Italian territory itself might be under attack or that the Allies were engaged in a great transfer of strength between Gibraltar and Suez.

The Italian command in a special communiqué claimed that two cruisers, one destroyer and 4 steamers were sunk out of one of two British convoys and a battle cruiser, one destroyer and 4 steamers heavily damaged.

Carrier Protected

The Italians said the convoy attacked was protected by "numerous units of the line and by two aircraft carriers." Spotting the convoy early Saturday the Italians said their scout planes later lost sight of it and the first attack was not delivered until Sunday.

Numerous formations of torpedo planes, bombers and fighters then struck the flotilla, the Italians reported. They acknowledged 20 planes lost to themselves and reported shooting 15 carrier-borne planes down in flames.

The operations were resumed in the early hours of Monday morning against the remaining units," the command continued.

Court Rules Against Collins

Little Rock —(P)— The supreme court Monday unanimously upheld Labor Commissioner W. J. McCain's dismissal of Eli W. Collins as Employment Security Division director.

The ruling reversed Pulaski Circuit Judge Lawrence C. Auten's decision. The tribunal ruled that there was sufficient evidence to justify the merit system council in dismissing Collins an appointee of the Bailey administration last October on 6 charges including the permitting of poker playing at the agency office and betting on horse races himself.

There is substantial evidence to the effect that there was gambling going on both poker games and horse race betting and evidence showed these things were carried on in such a manner that the director if attending to his duties would be bound to have knowledge of them," the court said.

McCain said he would name the permanent director late Monday from a Merit System eligible list composed of Randall Falk, Thurston Runyon and Roland M. Shelton all of Little Rock.

Shelton has been acting director since Collins' dismissal.

Kiwanis Ladies to Attend Weekly Meet

The Kiwanis Committee for arrangements, headed by Herbert Burns, announced Monday that all planning to attend the Kiwanis ladies' night program at the Country club should meet at the Hotel Henry Monday night at 7:30.

Kiwanis officials said that inclement weather would not affect the program and expressed a belief that a large crowd would attend.

We, the Women

Show Pride in Your Wife
If You Want to See Joy

By RUTH MILLETT
"Don't forget to wear your Red Cross pin, Mama." That's Papa speaking.

Mama has done a lot of things in the thirty-five years they have been married to make Papa proud of her. But he has never been quite as proud of anything as of that Red Cross pin and the hours of unselfish work that gave Mama the right to wear it.

Mama is a little surprised that Papa even noticed it. Men aren't very good about showing pleasure at their wives' achievements.

That is probably one reason why so many women don't realize how much pride men take in having their wives do really worthwhile things.

Because he is proud of her war work, Mama is getting twice the amount of satisfaction out of doing it that she would if he paid no attention or treated it as though it were unimportant.

Needed: More Proud
Husbands

If there were more husbands like Papa who showed pride in their wives' accomplishing things on their own, there would be fewer women—even in peacetime—kissing their lives playing bridge, gossiping, and trying to out-entertain each other.

So, give Mama a hand, men, when she does something that makes you proud of her. It does not give her any encouragement if you're only secretly proud.

Let her know about it. Brag about her a little to other people when she is around to hear.

Chances are she applauds every effort you make. Women are good at patting their men on the back and egging them on. But, it's a rare husband who realizes that women, as much as men, need to know that someone is proud of them for the worthwhile things they attempt and sometimes accomplish.

People of U. S. Must Save Until It Hurts

Washington — The dope is that the government will spend some $77 billion on war production in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1942.

There is heard in Washington a little doubt that it will be possible to spend this much on war production alone since there may not be enough of some raw materials or semi-finished parts to keep production machinery going, but there seems to be no doubt the government will be able to raise the money. The only question is how.

One theory is that this whole sum might be financed by taxation. That is, if the national income reaches $117 billion a year, it wouldn't be too much of a thing to absorb $77 billion, or 65 per cent of it in taxes. This would have the advantage of holding down the national debt, which is plenty big enough already. The trouble with this idea is that it might ruin a lot of businesses not considered essential to the war, and it would make the war terribly unpopular. It is therefore crossed off as a political impossibility.

The decision has apparently been made to raise only $24 billion of the $77 billion by taxation. This year's tax bill was intended to raise about $20 billion. To boost

THE STORY: Hunter Dent, who manages wealthy Strickland Ballard's farm, has hidden the mysterious actions of Ballard's disappointed son, Junior. On the night Hunter finds Junior, lying apparently drunk beside a satchel containing $17,000, a bank messenger was wounded and robbed of a satchel containing that amount. Hunter puts Junior to bed and hides the money in a wall safe. Next morning he finds that Junior was not drunk but shot, and is near death. And he finds the money gone from the safe to which only he knew the combination.

SHERIFF STEPS IN

UTTERLY stunned at the disappearance of the money from the safe, Hunter Dent dropped on the day bed and raked his fingers through his hair. If many more inexplicable things happened around here there would be nothing left for him to do but count his fingers and talk to himself. He rose and went unsteadily back to the open safe door. He could have spared himself the movement. The bag and money were gone.

"Let me see," he muttered, reviewing events. He had gone out at dawn and looked after the colored boys at their feeding and milking. The safe, he would have sworn, was locked; but he remembered not locking the office door. When he came back at sunrise Red was waiting below at the foot of the outside stairway. There he had kissed her. The office was still unlocked while the doctor examined Junior Ballard. But Hunter had locked the door just before taking the boy to the hospital at Middleton. "That would mean," he concluded, "that the one who entered here did it probably just before dawn, perhaps within five minutes after I went to the barns."

He took out his wallet, drew forth a small card. The card contained in code the combination to the safe. There was but this one card. No one except the dealer, and Hunter, and the manufacturer of the safe naturally, knew of the card, knew in fact how to decipher the code so as to read the combination.

AT NOON when he came in for dinner a radio was going somewhere. Perhaps it was in the butler's private domain. Hunter listened, his attention caught by the theme song of the Ballard Remedies. The McDougal twins were singing their cowboy and hillbilly numbers. They had beautiful if unimportant voices—just right for plugging medicines to rural audiences.

"And now, friends," the announcer said, a voice that was bubbling over with neighborliness and good health, "we of the Ballard Ballads have a most unusual offer to make you folks. 'Simply go to your drug store tomorrow and say, 'Give me a 60-cent bottle or box of tablets, of Ballard's Bitters, for your sour stomach.' Send us the top of carton, and within a short time you will receive your generous sample of Ballard's Prolific Corn. Could anything be more generous than that?'"

Hunter Dent swore. Already Strickland Ballard was cashing in on Hunter's life work.

IN the early afternoon Hunter telephoned the hospital to find out how Junior Ballard was. The voice reported there was no news yet. He went about his duties but his mind was not on his work. It was toward the middle of the afternoon when he had a glimpse of a car down in the big wood next to the river. His impression was the car was inside the stone gate there. His first thought was, naturally, about Junior's wrecked car. His next was an instinct to keep out intruders, for Strickland Ballard was death on trespassers. He dipped down, so as not easily to be seen, and crept along until he could get inside the cover of the woods. By a path not much used he was able to steal right up to where three people were standing.

The most notable of the trio was Red Ballard. She was in khaki pants with puttees, tweed jacket. Outdoors girl. Her red hair made a bright blob of color in the autumn sunlight. "That smallest fat man garbed pretty much like a farmer in the locality was the constable, Major Doolittle. The other man, barrel-bodied, six-foot-four, red-faced, rough, was Sheriff Anderson of Midland County. The three were examining the tread of a car tire in the soft, moist earth just within the iron gate. They had not managed so far to trace the tread to where Junior had wrecked his car the past night.

Doolittle's voice was cracked with excitement. "That's the tread of the death car, beyond any shadow of doubt!"

wasn't the 'death-car,' Major. We believe it was the car in which the killer escaped. From what I can gather, after the stick-up and shooting the killer leaped in his car, drove furiously out of town, and came by back roads in this general direction."

"But for him to get in here Sheriff?" Red protested. "That is absurd. It's really impossible."

"And why, Miss Ballard?"

"Why, this is private grounds, that gate was locked as you find it now; it's perfectly clear the rusty chain had not been disturbed. That is, not recently."

Sheriff Anderson examined the fastenings. "On the contrary, Miss Ballard, the chain and lock seem to have been used quite recently."

Hunter stepped from the cover of the tree which had hidden him. He smiled at the trio. "Pardon me, but I couldn't help overhearing the conversation." He glanced at the deep picture of the tread in the earth. "The tire marks were made by my car, gentlemen. If you will get into your car there in the road and drive around, coming in by way of the front, I'll be glad to show you the exact pattern. And Sheriff Anderson is correct when he says the gate has been opened recently. I came in here myself last night."

He took a large key from his pocket. It closed like a jack-knife. He walked over to the huge, old-timey lock. "This key fits the antique lock, as you can see, Sheriff. It is the only key to the lock on the place, and so, of course, it would be out of the question for any one else to have come through here in a car."

"I—I see." The sheriff stroked his chin. He'd shaved since noon. There were many pink veins in his almost childlike cheeks. The way he kept saying "I see" got on Hunter's nerves, but he continued to smile. "Good thing," he thought, "Junior and I got a new set of car tires at the same time before rationing started." The officers crossed the stone fence and drove around. Hunter nodded for Red to follow, and walked quickly back, cutting through to beat the car. He got the girl past the place where the car had gone into the brush. More and more he felt the absolute necessity of protecting Junior, and saving the girl. At the garage Hunter backed his car out. Anderson and Doolittle checked the tread. The sheriff did something Hunter did not like. He took a small camera and made photographs of the tires. Hunter noted there was no dirt in the tread at all.

Pipeline Won't Meet Demands

By NEA Service

New York — The new crude oil pipeline from Longview, Tex., to Salem, Ill., which the W.P.B. has ordered rushed to six-month completion, is going to help... but, it's 300,000-barrel daily yield will be only a drop in the 1,297,000-barrel bucket now estimated to be the minimum needed daily to quench the most vital thirsts of the oil-guzzling machines of the Industrial Atlantic Coast area.

First Pipe Line Built In 1879

Moving oil by pipe line is an old story in America. The first pipe line, also built to bring oil east, was completed in 1879, and since then America has been criss-crossed with an underground network for shipping crude oil the equivalent of nearly three times the distance around the world.

Yet for all of the 62,500 miles of crude plus 12,000 miles of refined oil trunk lines lacing industrial America, the moving of oil to the east coast without tankers presents a gigantic problem. At present there are only three crude oil lines into the east, with a daily capacity of only 50,000 barrels.

To them is being added another 50,000-barrel capacity of three other lines formerly used to pump refined oil from eastern refineries back to midwest industry. The flow on these lines is being reversed to bring crude and refined oils east.

Even though the new line will not come all the way to the east coast, it will greatly increase daily deliveries in this area. This is due to the fact that it takes only about 10 days for railroad tank cars to make a round-trip between Illinois and New York, as opposed to a 20-day round-trip from Texas.

Four Times the Size of Previous Lines

There are some oil men, however, who believe that the increase would be greater if the oil line were built from Salem east rather than from Texas to Salem. They reason that the mid-west railroads are less congested than the east's and therefore can move tank cars more quickly.

Technically, the new line raises tion provisions on the bonds so they could not be turned in for cash during the war. After the war, it is figured the bonds might be paid off by refunding the public debt, the idea being that the debt could be retired by maintaining war taxes on a post-war basis.

This analysis, worked out by a high-ranking government economist is presented here as the simplest possible explanation of the government's fiscal problem today.

some new engineering problems. Its 24-inch pipe is four times as large as the largest section of pipe now used on any American crude oil lines.

More than that, to conserve steel so vitally needed in other war industries, the line's walls will be thinner than normal, adding to the problem of maintaining the pressure necessary to keep the oil gurgling northwards at about 4 miles an hour.

Present plans call for pumping stations on an average of every 50 miles along the 550-mile route to give the oil fresh pressure-booster.

Won't Break Bottleneck

The problem of the petroleum supply itself is non-existent. In fact there is still enough excess production capacity to necessitate rationing of production among American's various oil fields. Yet even when the new line is completed next spring, even with re-routing of existing pipe lines and the digging up and re-laying of almost 1500 miles of old pipe, even with the new 1250-mile refined oil line completed in six months last fall in the southeast, the East Coast is faced with a serious shortage.

Best estimates today indicate that about 1,100 barrels of oil are now being here delivered daily. The estimate of need, taking into account the increased use of heavy and light fuel oils in winter, is about 1,297,000 daily. And this is figured with such drastic curtailments as 60 per cent in auto gasoline, 30 per cent in home heating and 25 per cent in industrial heating.

Free Ice Cream as the Lexington Sank

Livermore, Calif. — (AP) — They had a fire sale on ice cream as the aircraft carrier Lexington lay stricken in the Coral Sea battle. After the Japs attacked without causing much damage, Lt. Frank Gill related, crewmen assembled as usual in the ship's store to buy ice cream cones.

Presently a fire from broken gasoline lines flared up. The storekeeper started offering double-header cones for a nickel.

When it became apparent the ship would have to be abandoned, the storekeeper started giving ice cream away. Some of the boys filled their tin helmets, and gobbled the cream as they made their way to the deck, and prepared to go over the side.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Proposed by the General Assembly and filed in the office of the Secretary of State on the 27th day of March, 1941.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND SENATE OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS, A MAJORITY OF BOTH HOUSES AGREEING THERETO: THAT THE FOLLOWING IS HEREBY PROPOSED AS AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS, AND THE SAME BEING SUBMITTED TO THE ELECTORS OF THE STATE FOR APPROVAL OR REJECTION AT THE NEXT GENERAL ELECTION FOR SENATORS AND REPRESENTATIVES, IF A MAJORITY OF THE ELECTORS VOTING THEREON ADOPT SUCH AMENDMENT, THE SAME SHALL BECOME A PART OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF ARKANSAS, TO-WIT:

Section 1. Whenever in any county where there is located a public hospital owned by such county or by any municipal corporation therein, whether such hospital be operated by such county or municipal corporation or by a benevolent association as the agent or lessee of such county or municipal corporation, one hundred or more electors of such county shall file a petition with the county judge asking that an annual tax on real and personal property in such county be levied for the purpose of maintaining, operating and supporting such hospital and shall specify a rate of taxation not exceeding one mill on the dollar of the assessed value of real and personal property in the county. The question as to whether such tax shall be levied shall be submitted to the qualified electors of such county at a general election. Such petition must be filed at least thirty days prior to the election at which it will be submitted to the electors. The county judge upon the filing of such petition shall notify the county board of election commissioners thereof and the county board of election commissioners shall cause the question to be placed upon the ballot in substantially the following form:

FOR a mill tax on real and personal property to be used for maintenance, operation and support of a public hospital.

AGAINST a Mill tax on real and personal property to be used for maintenance, operation and support of a public hospital.

Section 2. The election commissioners shall certify to the county judge the result of the vote and if a majority of the qualified electors voting on the question at such election vote in favor of the specified tax then it shall thereafter be continually levied and collected as any general taxes of such county are levied and collected. The result of the election shall be proclaimed by the county judge by publication for one insertion in some newspaper published and having a bona fide circulation in such county. The result so proclaimed shall be conclusive unless attacked in the courts within thirty days and after the election it shall not be competent to attack the result thereof on the ground that any signers of the petition were not qualified electors. The proceeds of any tax so voted shall upon the settlement of the collecting officer be paid by the treasurer of the county to the treasurer of such hospital to be used by such treasurer in the maintenance, operation and support of such institution; provided that any county where there may be more than one hospital qualified to receive the proceeds of such tax, the quorum court at its meeting for the purpose of adopting the county's budget, shall provide for the apportionment of the proceeds of said tax between the institutions so qualified according to the respective needs.

Section 3. Whenever one hundred or more electors of any county shall file a petition with the county judge asking that such tax be raised, reduced or abolished, the question shall be submitted to the qualified electors at a general election. Such petition must be filed at least thirty days prior to the election at which it will be submitted to the voters. The ballots shall follow, as far as practicable, the form set out in Section 2 hereof, and the result shall be certified and proclaimed as provided in Section 2 hereof and shall be conclusive in like manner. The tax shall be lowered, raised or abolished as the case may be, according to the majority of qualified electors voting on the question at such election, provided, however, that it shall not be raised more than one mill on the dollar. If lowered or raised the revised tax shall thereafter be continually levied and collected and the proceeds used in the manner and for the purposes provided in Section 2 hereof.

Section 4. This amendment shall be self executing and shall become a part of the constitution of the state of Arkansas when approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon at the next general election.

Witness my hand and Seal this 20th day of April, 1942.

Has Read 86,000 Papers

Each week for the past four years, Stenhouse, who hails from Greenville, S. C., has read every paper, daily and weekly, published in Georgia—a total of 86,000.

No scrapbook fan, Stenhouse reads the prolific press purely for pay. He graduates this summer from Emory after having paid all expenses from the income of his one-man clipping bureau, believed to be the only one operated by a college student.

Working in his dormitory room, the tall, blond journalism student has sliced some 210,000 articles from the pages of Georgia newspapers since he first organized the Georgia Press Association's official clipping bureau four years ago.

Clients of his clipping service include politicians, state agencies and private businesses which are interested in seeing how much publicity they rate each week. At present his accounts number more than two dozen.

Besides working eight hours a day reading newspapers, young Stenhouse attends a full schedule of classes, studies enough to make above-average grades and edits or writes for three student publications.

Navy Cadets to Get Tough

By NEA Service
Chapel Hill, N. C. — Get tough! At the University of North Carolina, one of four of the Navy's Pre-Flight Training Schools, 242 cadets are being welded into a steely fighting force under a program which officials call the most rigorous and revolutionary ever conceived.

The other schools are situated at Georgia, Iowa and Saint Mary's College of California.

For three months, these young men (the Navy is not starting from scratch, has hand-picked fine physical specimens in its first lot) are living a monastic life.

From 5:30 a. m. until 9:30 p. m., future aviators box, wrestle, tumble, chop wood, run, do hard manual labor and calisthenics, swim, play basketball, baseball, soccer, football and learn to fight fair and foul.

Besides body-building (at least two hours of athletics a day are compulsory), 36 instructors teach three academic courses: (1) essentials of Naval service; (2) nomenclature and recognition; (3) mathematics and physics. Military plans include infantry drill and tactics, seamanship, navigation, ordnance and first aid.

Commanding officer of the school is Commander O. O. Kessing, who has a staff of former sports luminaries. Director of Athletics is Lieut. Comdr. Harvey J. Harrison, former coach at Pennsylvania and Rutgers. Head football coach is Lieut. Comdr. James Crowley, "Sleepy Jim" of Notre Dame and Fordham fame. Lieut. Ed Don George, former world heavyweight wrestling champion, is tutoring rough and tumble.

Guiding light of the entire program is Lieut. Comdr. Thomas J. Hamilton, former football star and head coach at the Naval Academy, who has cut through a maze of detail and red tape to put the program into action.

The goal—30,000 tough aviation cadets a year.

Or—as Navy men say—30,000 Tom Hamiltons to ax the Axis.

Luther Patrick is a respected member of the House. He was one of the first toilers in the defense vineyard. He voted against that much-misunderstood, so-called Congressional "pension." I don't think he holds an X-card. In spite of the fact that he was up for reelection he attended to affairs

Harrison in Hollywood

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

Dictator of Dance

Hollywood — The lights went on, and languid extras straightened up and began to look like night club customers having a big time. Someone started playing a piano, and on the stage a girl in a long, frothy white gown whirled into a dance.

After about a minute, Director Irving Reis called "Cut." Then he and the dancer, Lucille Ball, looked questioningly at a tall, husky man on the sidelines. "That's it, Irving; that's fine, Lucille," said Chester Hale.

This veteran showman has put more dancers on the stage than Flo Ziegfeld, George White and Earl Carroll together. During his busiest season he had 22 companies and 32 girls—each hoofing in theaters and night spots scattered over half the world. A graduate of the Ballet Russe, with Pavlova and Nijinsky, Hale has conducted a school in New York while staging revues and, currently, the big "Tecapades."

Yet Hollywood isn't well acquainted with Chester Hale. He could have worked out here steadily, bossing super-duper musicals. But he hasn't. In 1934 he accepted a contract but soon went back east vowing he had seen the last of meddling executives, futile extravagance and the movies' unrivaled procrastination and wild disorder.

His present brief job of helping with the dancing in RKO's "The Big Street" is the result of a personal friend's persuasion, and Hale will return to Manhattan right away to whip together a new ice revue. He's glad he came, though, because he has found that Hollywood and its methods have improved a lot.

Spectacle Specialist

Best known as a spectacle specialist, Hale's work here has been mostly with individuals. He taught Greta Garbo the mazurka she danced in "Anna Karenina." Found her an apt and eager pupil—and he still shudders at the mismanagement that gave her an utterly unsuitable modern rumba to do in her most recent picture.

In "The Big Street," Lucille Ball plays a chorus girl who becomes a prominent dancer and then is crippled. Because she had no training in modern ballet, the here until three weeks before election day.

Most congressmen were stunned by his defeat. If Patrick was, his sense of humor certainly has revived him. Without animosity toward voters or successor, Patrick reviewed his predicament.

"No one man is indispensable, but every man lost from a Congress weakens that Congress," he said. "The voters do not grasp the importance of holding a war Congress intact."

"There is entirely too much distrust and skepticism in the minds of the populace toward this Congress. To blame the public is foolish. Congress must be able to blame itself, find the trouble, and find some way to overcome it. . . .

"The vengefulness of their unrest makes it all the more serious," Patrick said and to illustrate the troubled minds of the voters listed question after question he was asked; questions which he presumed other candidates for reelection to Congress also would be asked this summer.

Examples: "What about the agreement between Standard Oil and the German Chemical Trust? I heard that a number of times."

"What about Leon Henderson? Now, how are you going to answer a question like that?"

"What have you done for the small businessman? It seems there are so many small business men."

"What about gasoline rationing against all of us while Congress has all the gas it wants, on the floor and off? Why did not Congress do something about heading off the rubber shortage? What about the lag and drag in Congress on preparedness and war legislation? Why have you not been around to see us? But if I show up during a Congressional session, the question is, 'Isn't Congress in session?' You get back on the job."

"What about you fellows being asleep at the switch when the Japs hit us at Pearl Harbor? Why haven't you brought more war industries into this district? When are we going to invade the continent of Europe? How many fighting men do we have in the far east? (Military secrets.) When are you going to settle down to a tax program we can depend upon?"

Glamour Also Goes to War

Hollywood—Glamour factory at war.

The movies of World War II already are radically different from those of World War I.

It has been a matter of frequent comment that the first global holocaust inspired no films worthy of note until nearly a decade after the Armistice. During the war period itself, Hollywood turned out only a series of blatant melodramas so earnestly devoted to propaganda as to survive now, if at all, as mere curios. The pieces were typified by a gem called "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," in which the man with the withered arm was depicted as the arch-villain of his age, the man behind all the carnage, the man who loved to loathe.

The great pictures of that war came after the hatred and died. "The Big Parade" did not recreate the emotional and spectacular phase of the struggle until 1925; "What Price Glory?" came in 1926; "Journey's End" and "All Quiet on the Western Front," both reflecting futility and disillusionment as well as courage, came in 1930.

But pictures have grown since 1918, along with the awareness of their customers. Faster communication, widespread and developed interest in the background and roots of World War II, keenness in Hollywood for research, authenticity, and documentation, are giving us movies some of which may survive beyond the brief span of exhibition.

Six months after America's entry into the fight, Hollywood had ready "Mrs. Miniver," a film so sound in entertainment value as to point the way for future "propaganda" efforts. It is quiet, un-hysterical, courageous. It preaches no hate. And its very restraint, which makes for good drama, has a hundred times more inspirational or "propaganda" effect than a carload of "hem-dirty-Huns" essays. This may be said in lesser degree for "This Above All," which is better as a love story than as the social document it promised to be.

"Wake Island" promises to be a factual film—a dramatization of history-in-the-making. They are leaving out the usual dramatic aids such as spies, sirens, and special agents, and concentrating on the bare, official record of those 15 immortal days on Wake from December 8 to 22. The conventional love interest is missing too. The only woman in the cast, Barbara Britton, is a symbol only—of the wives that fighting men have left

A wartime necessity, it makes people grope their way from place to place trying to go where they want to go, trying to get to the things they need even in wartimes.

This is a Lighted Sign

It pierces the darkness . . . keeps people from groping . . . gives them the direction they need to go where they need to go.

This is a Newspaper

It gives directions, too. Its advertisements point the way to values. They show you what goods competitive merchants are offering, tell you when and where you can buy them, where to get the most value for your money.

During a war, time is valuable. Money must be spent wisely. Savings must be made to pay war taxes and buy Victory Bonds.

Because it saves your time and your money, by guiding you quickly to the best values, newspaper advertising is more important than ever during the war.
